Major Engineering Works on Lostwithiel Railway Bridge

Mariners are warned that extensive repair work to the railway bridge spanning the River Fowey at Lostwithiel (50 24.28N 004 41.20W) is underway and likely to last several months.

You are advised against attempting to navigate under the bridge whilst works are ongoing. Risks include reduced mast head clearance from suspended scaffolding, engineering pontoons spanning the river and causing an obstruction as well as the inherent risks from overhead working.

Vessels intending to transit the area should make prior contact with the engineers on site to assess the risk beforehand.
